HONGRONG, APRIL 7TH, 1898.

An agitation is at present on foot a Penang with the object of securing home rule for that settlement vis-a-vis Singapore. The movement does not seem to meet with unanimous support by any means, but the agitators are making considerable noise, as is the wont of agitators. Amongst other means adopted for furthering their end was that of getting up a Chinese petition, which appears to have been signed by 3,951 persons of that nationality. Inquiries have since been instituted through the Chinese Protectorate with the view of ascertaining which he did in an able manner. He drew a the reasons on which the signatories acted. with the result, so it is said, that nine-tenths | the life there, and he contracted this with the of them have professed entire ignorance of the ease, the peacefulness, and the intellectual oppor- milver brouch; H. Under the impression that the participation of the Chinese would tell at home a large number of persons of that nationality were brought to the public meeting held in connection with the anhject, and voted on the resolutions, although the rights and wrongs of the military contr bution question was a matter on which the vast majority could not possibly have formed any intelligent opinion. The fact is, the majority. Chinese in public matters adhere strictly to the principle of follow your leader. A few among them attain leading positions and the followers of these will unquestioningly carry out their directions without for a moment taking the trouble to think what they mean. An instance of this is to be found in connection with the recent hortive address to the unofficial members in Hongkong. The Kuk by certain remarks he had made in reference to that institution which were considered to be of a disparaging character the word went round that the address was not to be signed, and accordingly it was not signed, although the number of Chinamen who know that Mr. WHITHHEAD has ever said anything about the Po Leung Kuk is infinitesimal. The moral of all these instances seems to be that when the Europeans in the Straits Settlements or Hongkong deem it desirable to agitate public questions, whether by the holding of meetings or the signing of addresses and petitions, it would be more discreet to confine the movement to their own community and leave the Chinese to act independently: There will of course be exceptions to this as to every other rule. In cases where position, influence, and intelligence are allowed to count for more than mere numbers it will usually be desirable to secure the cooperation of the leading Chinese, but we cannot conceive that it can ever be useful to canvass for the support of the great mass of the native community who are incapable henever practicable, are despatched by first left to find out their own grievances and not however, very estisfactory—the pass, over all, by Europeans who wish to make use of them not easy to feel the political pulse of Penanc and form any definite opinion as to the real meaning of the agitation now in progress in that Settlement, but one of the Singapore papers speaks of it as being born of the vanity of a small European clique, and of the Chinese petition as being "the work of a few less worthy Europeans who have called in a few notoriously disaffected Chinese."
